

Bringing Biblical Principles of Governance

The Biblical View Regarding the Environment. (Do Christians Care?)

Greetings My Friends,

When Barack Obama was running for President, he said that the national debt under George W. Bush was so high, it was “unpatriotic.” He was right. But then, Obama became president and the debt increased dramatically. It continued to increase again under President Trump, particularly once Covid-19 hit.

But nothing has prepared us for what our national debt would become under Biden. It is beyond skyrocketing. In the Reagan-Carter debate of 1980, both parties seemed to care about the national debt. Now, only a handful of the Members of Congress bring it up.

One of Biden's bizarre reasons for astronomically increasing our debt is – you guessed it – climate change. Bernie Sanders and AOC are having their way as Biden goes along with this massive increase in debt. A Scriptural principle is at stake: “Thou shalt not steal”...against future generations. But no one seems to care.

There is more. Another Biblical issue, “creation care” (caring for the world that God has given us) must be considered. What about the environment? What about climate change? What does real science say? But much more importantly, what does Scripture say about all this?

Calvin Beisner

Congressman Bob McEwen once told me that Dr. Calvin Beisner is the smartest man on climate change and the environment, understanding the issues, not merely scientifically, but theologically. After interviewing Calvin, I agree. See for yourself. This is going to be a video you may want to watch more than once. Then, you might want to send it to others.
